A thoughtful and strategic litigator, Anna-Sophie Tirre represents clients in complex business disputes across a wide range of industries.

Anna-Sophie maintains a diverse litigation practice in state and federal courts, handling a broad spectrum of civil matters across all areas of business litigation. She represents employers in various workplace disputes, including complex wage and hour class actions, as well as single-plaintiff cases. Her employment practice is complemented by her work representing employee stock ownership plan (ESOP) trustees in litigation and U.S. Department of Labor investigations nationwide.

Anna-Sophie also has substantial experience in consumer protection litigation, including defending businesses in Proposition 65 actions and consumer class claims.

Raised internationally and educated in Europe, Asia, and the United States, Anna-Sophie brings a broad perspective and strong adaptability to her practice. Clients and colleagues value her for her clear, effective writing, practical problem-solving, and collaborative approach.

In her free time, Anna-Sophie enjoys gardening and embracing the outdoors with her husband, Nate.
