Brian Lee represents clients in all types of civil litigation with particular emphasis in product and premises liability and medical malpractice defense.

Brian, who practices in both state and federal court, is experienced in pre-suit counseling as well as all phases of litigation. He is known for his attention to detail – both factual and legal – which accounts for his successes in all types of resolution, including mediation, arbitration and trial. Brian quickly achieves client confidence through his thorough witness preparation and cross-examination as well as his research, writing and oral argument.

Before joining Tucker Ellis, Brian handled a wide array of matters, including medical professional liability, premises and retail liability, and automobile litigation in both state and federal courts. Brian's experience also includes working as a prosecutor at a District Attorney's office for several years, managing a heavy caseload and trying several jury trials to verdict.
