Ethan Weber is a thoughtful strategist and litigator who helps clients navigate complex legal matters in trial and appellate courts across the country.

Ethan focuses on high-stakes issues spanning state and federal law, developing tailored strategies for a diverse range of clients facing significant legal challenges. His practice centers on cases defined not by a single subject matter but by the complexity of the issues and the importance of the outcome. He defends corporations in class action litigation, resolves intricate commercial disputes across industries, and crafts persuasive briefs and oral arguments at every stage of proceedings. His approach combines careful legal analysis with creative problem-solving to position clients for success in motion practice, at trial, and on appeal.

Ethan is a member of the Supreme Court of Ohio's Commission on Continuing Legal Education, where he serves as the representative of Ohio's Eighth Appellate District. He was appointed to the Commission by Justice R. Patrick DeWine. Before joining Tucker Ellis, Ethan was a law clerk to the Honorable J. Philip Calabrese (N.D. Ohio) and the Honorable Douglas R. Cole (S.D. Ohio).
