Lindsey Sacher represents both plaintiffs and defendants in complex business and tort litigation.

A trial lawyer, Lindsey handles all stages of litigation, through trial and the appellate process. She has substantial experience defending clients in nearly every type of tort claim – among them, claims involving premises and product liability, negligence, and various toxic exposures. Lindsey's cases allege a wide array of damages from death and catastrophic injuries (brain, severe disfigurement, and loss of limb) to property loss and destruction.

Lindsey also has significant experience with insurance coverage matters and regularly litigates business and commercial disputes.

Lindsey is known for her dynamic presentation style and outstanding written work product. Before becoming an attorney, Lindsey taught high school English. Her past experience in the classroom, coupled with her persuasive writing, lay the foundation for Lindsey's successful presentation of complex legal arguments in a manner that is captivating and easy for judges and juries to understand.
