Pieter Keushkerian uses his interdisciplinary background to defend corporations in mass tort and products liability matters.

Pieter is well versed in all stages of litigation, having drafted memoranda on various complex substantive and procedural matters and provided assistance to numerous trial teams.

While in law school, Pieter served as a judicial extern to the Honorable John A. Kronstadt of the United States District Court for the Central District of California. This experience helped shape Pieter's practice today by providing him with key insights into the pretrial process.

Pieter also has devoted significant time to serving the human rights community. At USC Gould School of Law, he worked with the International Human Rights Clinic on a matter involving the wrongful detention of a Kyrgyz national in Central Asia. In his role as a student attorney for the clinic, Pieter working alongside politicians, United Nations personnel, and members of civil society, honing the advocacy and oratory skills he now brings to complex litigation matters.

When not in the office, Pieter enjoys running and cooking, and he is an avid soccer fan.
