Craig Osterholt handles in-house document reviews for the Tucker Ellis eDiscovery Group.

Craig brings a unique perspective to the practice, having worked for both law firms and managed review companies. He has worked on large-scale document review campaigns, managed teams, and acted as a liaison with vendors. Craig's experience includes developing strategies, controlling costs, and maintaining discovery and electronic evidence for the life of a case.

Well versed in Relativity and most major eDiscovery review platforms, Craig uses these tools to perform targeted searches and culling techniques to ensure the review is concise and consistent.

Craig enjoys spending time with his family, golf, and is an avid fly fishermen.
