Spencer Krebs represents clients in state and federal court in matters involving labor and employment, complex commercial disputes, and general civil litigation.

Spencer works closely with companies ranging from start-ups and family businesses to multinational corporations to obtain achievable goals that consider both business and legal interests. He is experienced in all aspects of disputes concerning business transactions and relationships – from pre-litigation counseling to appellate advocacy – and has successfully resolved lawsuits involving real estate transactions, construction disputes, breach of contract claims, business torts, shareholder disputes, and insurance coverage.

Spencer has also been involved in all aspects of probate litigation. He handles complex probate litigation matters pertaining to wills, trusts, and guardianships, including claims involving breach of fiduciary duties by a trustee or executor.

Spencer lives in Kamm's Corner. In his spare time, he enjoys cooking, golfing, traveling, hiking with his dog Athena, and rooting for Cleveland's sports teams.
